THE PAN TAN GAME.

The game of "Tan" was once as popular with our Mongolian population as the game of "Faro" with the "Melican Man," but when the police inaugurated suppressive measures against gambling in this city, and closed the saloons devoted to games of chance frequented by the "outside barbarians," they also turned their attention to the Chinese gambling dens. For several mouths gambling of any kind, except the quiet game of draw poker in a secluded room, has been a hazardous business, and the paraphernalia of faro and tan have been laid aside, or stored away by the Property Clerk at the Police Office. A few wenturesome votaries of both games have occasionally risked a game in an out of the-way place, but have usually brought up in the City Prison and lost their implements. Thirteen Chinese gamblers were brought in by the police on Thursday, and four more yesterday; and we may perhaps explain in this connection THE GAME OF TAX. THE PAN TAN GAME.

THE GAME OF TAN. More talked about and less understood than any other of its class. The proper name of this favorite Chinese pastime is "Fan Tan." It is not unlike the game of faro in some particulars. The dealer seats himself at a table, upon which is placed a plate of tin, glass or lead, about twelve inches square.

The four sides of this plate are numebred, as in the diagram. To the right of the dealer is a tin box, containing Chinese copper coin of various denominations, buttons, round and square, blocks of wood and narrow pasteboard cards. The bets are placed on the table, opposite the sides of the square plate, portion of the cards are in pairs. A person wishing to risk an article of jewelry passes it to the dealer, and after ascertaining how much he will be allowed to bet on it, the dealer places it upon one of these cards and gives the other of the pair to the player. The blocks, buttons and Chinese cards have various values, like the "chips" in a game o. The player can wager any portion of the amount on his pledge by placing the article which represents the amount in position upon the card given him. His losses and gains are kept by the dealer with the same articles used to signify the extent of the bet. When the bets are all arranged, the dealer takes from one compartment of the tray a hundral of small copper coin and places them in front of him. He then draws from the pile, with a rod about eighteen inches in length, the coin, four at a time and pushes them to his left until four or less romain. The number of coins left denotes the winning side of the plate. If there is but one coin left all bets on that side (1) win, the bets on the opposite side (3) lose and those to each side (2) and (4) are not affected, unless one of the narrow red cards is placed under the bet, when they lose. If a bet is placed upon one of these red cards, for instance at 4, and 4 comes out winner, it is paid three for one. The red card may be paced, one end upon the top of a bet at 2, for instance, and the other pounting towards 3. It loses if I or 4 win, "stands off" if 3 wins, and is paid double if 2 wins. Bets placed at the corners take in both sides of the angle to win and both sides of the opposite angle to lose. The game is simple and there are no "splite." The bank exacis the following both sides of the opposite angle to lose. The game is simple and there are no "splits." The bank exacts the following percentage, which is deducted from the percentage, which is deducted from the winnings: Five cents from each winning bit up to $1; ten cents to $2 50. From a $49 bet $3 50 is taken. When there were no restrictions upon the game very heavy play was indulged in by the Chinese, and bets as high as $500 were frequently played. Out of such a bet the game deducts $35 in case it wins. The dealer, if an adept at slight of hand, can easily cheat at this game. So practiced does his eye become that long before the pile of coins are raked down he can tell the number which will reman, and by a quick movement can change the result.

THE POTTAWATAMIES.—The last of these Indians, about 50 men, women and children, have left Wisconsin. The Dayenport (Iowa) Gazette savs:

quick movement can change the result.

These Indians came from Steven's Point, Wisconsin, and were on their way to the Pottawatamie reservation in Central Kansas. They form the last remnant of a powerful tribe which, only fifty years ago, held nearly all the territory now comprising the State of Wisconsin. Whether it was the effect of the heat on the hurricane deak, which they occupied, or of sorrow over removal from their old places of abode, we do not know, but places of abode, we do not know, but this was certainly a wretched looking set. Their chief, Meswenomee—"brave set. Their chief, Meswenomee—" brave arm," or, more strictly speaking, the sort of a man that will take "nothing from nobody"—was with them, clad in the garments of civilization, and wearing a kind of countenance that was anything but prepossessing. One pappoose in the arms of its father had the bowl of a nasty, stinking old pipe in its mouth, apparently enjoying the taste of the thing. Its mother took the pipe away, the papoose set up a yell, and the brave swore at his squaw is good English. She gave the child the pipe, when it again put the filthy bowl in the cavity under its nose, and stopped its bawling. Then the brave gave the child to its mother, and there was peace in the family. George there was peace in the family. George Davesport visited the band, and distrib-uted numerous packages of tobacce and Davesport visited the band, and distributed numerous packages of tobacco and clay pipes among them, and it less than ten minutes four of the braves were at cards, playing for each other's tobacco. Most of the Indians, however, seemed to think a good deal of George for his presents, and stayed about him as long as he remained on the boat. With the exception of a tew of the tribe, who work in the pineries, Wisconsin has taken leave of the last of the Pottawatamies.

ANECDOTE OF SENATOR CASS. - In year ANEXDOTE CF SENATOR CASS.—In years gone by there dwelt in Washington John Guy, a character in his way, in connection with whom Colonel Forney tells the following anecdote, or rather quotes it from Daniel Dougherty: Guy kept the National Hotel in Washington, and among his guests was General Cass, then Senator from Michigan. Guy dressed like Cass, and although not as portly, his face, including the wart, was strangely similar. One day a Western friend of the house came in after a long ride, dusty and tired, and walking up to the office, encountered General Cass, who was quietly standing there. Mistaking him for Guy, he sispped him on the shoulder, and exclaimed, "Well, old fellow, here I am! The last time I hung my hat up in there dwelt in Washington John your shanty one of your clerks sent me to the fourth story; but now that I have got hold of you. I insist upon a lower room." The General, a most dignified personage, taken aback by this startling salute, coolly replied, "You have committed a mistake, Sir. I am not Mr. Guy: I am General Cass, of Michigan," and angrily turned away.. The Western man was shocked at the unconcious outrage he had committed; but before he had recovered from his mortification, General Cass, who had passed around the office, confronted him again, when, a second time mistaking him for Guy, he faced him and said, "Here you are at last! I have just made a devil of a mistake; I met old Cass, and took him for you, and I am afraid the Michiganer has gone off mad." What General Cass would have said may be well imagined, if the real Guy had not approached and rescued the innocent offender from the twice-angered statesman.

endeavor, will meet with any response but an enumeration of the difficulties that will lie in the path you wish to travel. The difficulty-monger is to be met with not only in domestic and social life, but also in business. It not unfrequently occurs in business relations that the chief will never by any source receive, without many objections and much bringing forward of possible difficulties, anything that is brought to him by his subordinates. They at last cease to take pains, knowing that no amount of pains will prevent their work being dealt with in a spirit of ingenious objectiveness. At last they say to themselves, "The better the thing we present, the more opportunity he will have for developing his unpleasant talent of objectiveness, and his impoinance of the part of Drs. Good Reddance.—The man who talked people to death left for Montana this morning. Just how Montana, in her present distressed state of finances, will be able to stomach him, is more than we can see. Should a stage be stopped with him aboard, the chances are that he would talk the robbers to death before they could "get the drop" on him. He came in our sanctum yesterday, and when we showed him a card with a coffin on it, he allowed that "it was a superior engraving, and, by the way, it reminded him of a man who was talked to death in New Orleans," etc., which the same, to
